Careables started with a question, if we are all different, why do we care for everyone the same?! This question started a four-year-long project that focused on ma healthcare systems more open and accessible to people with different needs and backgrounds. Careables are healthcare devices co-designed in a collaborative ecc tem where people become creators, not only innovation users. In our case, patients, their families, healthcare professionals and designers are involved in the co-de process as experts in their specific environments. Using Digital Fabrication and technology, Careables devices are produced and then made available through open knowledge documentation on the careables.org platform for others to replicate and customize to their specific needs.

During this presentation, visitors will take a tour of our Online Careables Exhibition, where they will see first-hand the devices our partners created from around the world. This will be followed by a Talk and Q&A session on how Careables evolved during this last year in different countries from the Global South and how the ope source making experience can change the future of health and care.

Careables invites you to a VR meet-up at our new online exhibition to talk about Open Health and the maker movement.

Careables supports the creation of open source and inclusive health care devices that are customizable to people's actual needs and are locally produced. Often pa use care solutions that do not fit their needs in terms of use, cost or aesthetics. Careables offers a platform for sharing open healthcare blueprints, including detaile documentation on facilitating the replication and adaptation of these technologies. Careables supports the creation of open source and inclusive healthcare devic that are customizable to people's health needs, using a participatory approach. It's a bottom-up digital social innovation focused on patients, healthcare profession and makers. Careables methodology relies upon co-designing open-source health devices by implementing workshops, prototyping series, and innovation training geting actors from healthcare, allowing these professionals to work together with other experts to find unique solutions.
